Law Not Enforced.

It is a notorious fact that the local option law is being repeatedly violated in Georgetown. So frequent have been the violations and so seldom the conviction of accused parties that it was thought necessary to call a meeting of citizens to consider the matter and to devise, if possible, some means to secure a better enforcement of the law.
According to a statement made by the chairman of the meeting, drunkenness is on the increase in Georgetown and it is a common sight to see drunken men on the streets. The town loses considerable revenue which was obtained from saloons, and the evil continues even in an aggravated form.—Georgetown Times.

Autos In Parks.

The question of admitting automobiles to national parks will be discussed at a conference to be held in the Yosemite early in October.

She Broke Down Entirely.

Lantz, W. Va.—Mrs. Tebe Talbott, of this place, says: "I had been troubled with womanly ailments for some time, and at last I broke down entirely. I got so weak I could scarcely walk across the room. Thanks to Cardui, I improved right off. Now I do my housework, and am feeling well." During the past 50 years, more than a million women have been benefited by taking Cardui. You must believe that Cardui will help you, too, since it helped all these others. Cardui is a safe harmless, vegetable remedy, of positive, curative merit, for women. At drug stores. Try one bottle. It will surely help you.

Oh! Those Tender Legs.

The largest bullfrog ever captured, so far as available records show, is on exhibition at Louisville, N. J. It was caught by Peter Stafford, a young stoneworker, in a pond in Green Knoll Park. The frog weighs twenty-four ounces, is fifteen inches long and more than ten inches in girth, and is credited with being about 100 years old. It will probably find a permanent resting place in the New York Aquarium.

Popular Mechanics Magazine For September.

The civilized world at large has an uneasy conscience on the subject of warfare, and views with distrust the formidable and cumbersome paraphernalia with which every military power is continually arming itself. During the customary summer maneuvers, on land and sea, at home and abroad, the number and variety of these munitions are greatly augmented, and improvements abound. As a result, the September number of Popular Mechanics Magazine contains fourteen articles describing new military equipment and improved methods. In England a dummy village was built to serve as an artillery target; model aeroplanes were used in studying the aerial invader problem; an enormous naval drydock has been constructed, and experiments are being conducted with a new automobile wireless outfit for use in the field. In France, where the importance of the aeroplane in military tactics is viewed most seriously, the question of which aeroplane, the pursuer or the pursued, would have the advantage in an actual aerial combat, has excited heated discussion, and a military aeroplane with folding wings has been devised. Also, remarkable hospital-like motor ambulances for field work were exhibited at the recent French maneuvers. Russia and Germany, too, have been productive in this line of achievement, and the United States has contributed something new to nearly every phase of the service, from marching to flying.

The Orator Who Nearly Lost His Pants.

In the September American Magazine appears the following about a delegate at the Baltimore convention who made a speech:
"The crowd listened approvingly to a frenzied speech from a Southwestern statesman who introduced an entirely new gesture. With his right hand outstretched he made wild clutches at his shoulder with his left hand thumb. It turned out that this was no mere affectation to emphasize his rhetoric, but that his 'galluses' were slipping. He remarked to a fellow delegate as he came down from the platform: 'I darn near lost my pants.'"

Confessed Bigamy.

Arthur Chapman, alias Chapel, who was charged with bigamy, upon his confession in open court at Ed-dyville, the jury found him guilty as charged in the indictment and Judge Hanbery sentenced him to the penitentiary for from three to ten years. Chapman's wife and children and mother were present during the brief trial.

The September Wide World Magazine.

The Wide World for September contains an interesting selection of stories gathered from all quarters of the globe. Capt. A. H. Trapmann relates his experiences while passing "Through the Forbidden Country," the hinterland of Cyrenaica, in Northern Africa, the stronghold of the mysterious Senoussi sect, a region which not half-a-dozen white men have traversed. Captain Trapmann went with an Emir of the sect to whom he had rendered certain services, otherwise his life would not have been worth an hour's purchase. "The War Dance of the Spokanes" is ably described and illustrated by Clair Hunt of the U. S. Indian Service. Captain Foran, late District Superintendent of Police, British East Africa, writes of ivory-smuggling and Clifford Halle relates how Bede Bentley, an Englishman, delivered an automobile to Menelik, King of Abyssinia. It is an exciting narrative, for Bentley had to take the car over hundreds of miles of trackless wilderness inhabited by fierce tribes of savages. Numerous other articles dealing with adventures in every part of the world appear in this number of a unique magazine.

The September American Magazine.

The September American Magazine contains a lively political article full of interesting information and stories never before published about the Chicago and Baltimore national conventions. Another interesting contribution is a vivid account of lion hunting by Stewart Edward White, who has recently returned from a year's hunt in Africa. In the same number are articles by Ida M. Tarbell, Walter Prichard Eaton, the theatrical expert, Sir Francis Vane, who wants all the children in the world educated to disbelieve in war, and John S. Pardee, who shows how railroads have prospered through government rate regulation.

Ripening Dates In An Incubator.

The discovery of Prof. G. F. Freeman, of the Arizona state experimental station, that the incubator will ripen dates to a perfection that rivals the fruit brought direct to the Paris markets from Africa has revived the interest of the fruit growers of the Salt River Valley in Arizona, today the fruiting date palm is being extensively cultivated. —From the September Popular Mechanics Magazine.

American Control of the Panama Canal.

The people of the United States, in opening this canal, are conferring a great boon upon the commerce of the world, and they are especially contributing to the development of South America. In the adjustment of tolls, and in the use of the canal for the promotion of our own commerce, it would be incredible that we should be thought to have placed obstacles in the way of our own freedom of judgment. There has been much discussion of this question, based upon a wholly inadequate study and knowledge of the subject. The Government of the United States will treat all foreign nations equally and fairly, and will treat its own citizens precisely as it thinks best. A similar principle is involved in the question of fortifying the canal. We had long ago entered upon a systematic plan of creating modern coast defenses. Such a system is ridiculous if the defenses are not located at the strategic points. The Panama Canal is in some respects our most strategic point. The Panama Canal is in some respects our most strategic piece of navigable coast line. If we are fortifying at any points, it would seem absurd to leave unfortified the passage by which navies could go from one ocean to the other. Furthermore, an unfortified canal would be exposed to dynamite outrages which would render it impassable at a time when it might be necessary to send our fleet from the Atlantic to the Pacific, or vice versa. The people of the United States are conscious of pacific intentions toward all countries. They have no aggressive ambitions. In this regard they are more fortunate than are some other peoples and governments. From "The Progress of the World," in the American Review of Reviews for September.

Rapid-Fire Guns For Aeroplanes.

No branch of the science of aviation is receiving closer study in army circles than that tending to the development of armaments for aeroplanes. New ideas in rapid-fire guns, or adaptations of the old, are being experimented with by the military experts of all the great powers; and of the guns now creating interest an American gun is one of the most important. It is described, with illustration, in the September Popular Mechanics Magazine.
